

SANDBY RETURNS IN FINE RECITAL

Former Solo Cellist of Philadelphia Orchestra Plays Scandinavian Program

Herman Sandby, former solo violinist of the Philadelphia Orchestra, was heard in a program made up almost entirely of Scandinavian music at Witherspoon Hall last night.

It was indeed a pleasure to hear the fine, velvety tones of Mr. Sandby's instrument when he played the following program: "The Boatman's Song" by Grieg, "The Ship Starting" by Grieg, "The Boatman's Song" by Grieg, "The Ship Starting" by Grieg.

With the return of Mr. Sandby to New York this week after his conference with Federal officials, he has announced the plan that would call for the continued cooperation of all the exhibitors in the country and the entire country at large in the new drive for war funds.

Burglars Know Where to Go

They pick out the store that hasn't the Holmes sign on the door, because they know in it they can work undisturbed.

A watchman, no matter how efficient he may be, can't be in all parts of your premises at once.

When you place your property under the protection of the Holmes Company, you know this cannot happen.

"Busy"

In these extraordinary times it is only natural that telephone lines should frequently be reported busy.

The busier people are, the busier are their telephones!

If, perhaps when the call is urgent, you question whether the operator is sure that her "busy" report is correct, bear in mind that the test of the line called is a very simple matter.

Each operator senses her unusual responsibility these days. She realizes that any one of the flashing signal lamps on the switchboard may, entirely unknown to her, be heralding a call on which depends the security of a thousand fighting men.

It is a responsibility she is welcoming. And the public can never fully appreciate what a tremendously helping factor is the fine cooperation that is being generally accorded these young women of the great communication army.

SUGAR

With a view to giving the public a correct understanding of the sugar situation, the following FACTS are presented:

Existing conditions are world wide in their effect, not in any sense local. Any consideration of the question of available sugar supply must take into account a series of extraordinary factors.

The immediate effect of the declaration of the European war was to cut off from the world's market the sugar of the Central Powers. About one-third of the world's total production formerly came from within the present battlelines of Europe.

Not only did this cause an advance in the price of raw and refined sugar, but until competition was checked by the recent agreement among the Allies, it resulted in lessening the supply available to the people of this country last fall.

At the same time, an abundance of sugar—hundreds of thousands of tons—has been locked up in far-away Java, owing to the lack of ships to transport it.

The nation-wide movement to save the fruit crop last season greatly increased the use of sugar. While the quantity in the sugar bowl was for this and other reasons lessened, this sugar is wisely stored as food in preserved fruits, jams and jellies.

"Every jar of fruit preserved adds that much to our insurance of victory, adds that much to hasten the end of this conflict."

Because of the increased demand for sugar, more sugar cane has been planted in Cuba, Porto Rico, Hawaii and Louisiana, the chief sources from which the United States gets cane sugar.

The reports from Cuba and Porto Rico make the situation more favorable than a month ago for a supply to meet the sugar needs of all who are dependent on this source—including this country, our soldiers abroad and the Allies.

We buy raw cane sugar in the open market and refine it. To the extent of our ability, we are co-operating with the Government to insure a fair distribution of cane sugar, to stabilize the price to the consumer and to prevent hoarding and waste.

In order to make our output of refined sugar go as widely as possible, we distribute Franklin Cane Sugars in convenient-size cartons and small cotton bags.

It will be necessary for grocers and consumers to watch carefully their distribution and purchases during the approaching period of readjustment.

In war-time and at all times it is our aim to safeguard the interests of the public we serve.
